Description of experiment

This was a prior elicitation experiment with bins in which we had two presentation conditions: the original presentation condition, where all of the bins for an item were presented at once, in sequence from left to right, and a new condition where each bin was asked about on its own slide. The resolution was relatively low and varied by item. A copy of the experiment can be found at experiments/experiment8/morebins.html.

There were N participants in this version, N in the prior condition and N in the posterior condition.

Results

The distributions elicited with bins split across trials were different. They were less peaky than the distributions elicited all at once.
